Xabier remembers secondary school in the UK

X: England were playing Spain in Euro '96 and my classmates made me choose which country to support.

I: So which country did you support?

How did they meet?

Summing up the pros and cons

‘In a way it’s good because you can take the best things from both cultures, but I don’t think my sons will ever feel 100% English because their parents aren’t English. It’s quite _____.’

What are the pros and cons of bringing up a family in another country?

Make two lists.

The screenshot displays the 'NEW HEADWAY INTERMEDIATE iTUTOR' interface. At the top, there are tabs for 'UNITS' and 'SKILLS', and a header for 'UNIT 1 > LISTENING'. The main content area is titled 'A world in one family' with a subtitle 'A son and his mother talk about having different nationalities in the family'. It features flags for Spain, the UK, and Sweden. Below the title, it says 'Choose PLAY ALL or LISTEN.' and shows a video of a family. Two interactive buttons are visible: 'Part 1 Xabier' and 'Part 2 Ana', each with a 'LISTEN' button and a right arrow. At the bottom, there is a 'LISTENING WORD LIST' icon and a close button.

In General

What does she say...

- ...about her family?
- ...about speaking two languages?
- ...about people's reactions?
- ...about her future?

More personal opinions

Nowadays it's getting more ~~common~~ common for people to have relationships with a partner from a different country. They might even marry each other, and have children.

These kids are in a unique, strange environment, which can have good, but bad influence on them as well.

On the one hand, they can easily learn two languages, which should help them later on, trying to find a job. They also will know two cultures, which should make them more tolerant about people from different countries, and they shouldn't be racist.

On the other hand, they will not have the natural national cohesion, especially not when the parents live in a third country not at one of their home ones.

Summa summarum, it's difficult for the kids to fit in, but they come from a very nice multicultural environment, which can help them find friends as well.

In my opinion, the greatest advantage of having a partner from a different country, is becoming multicultural. With culture comes a lot of new stuff: language, friends, events/holidays, experiences. It would have been good if one of my parents ~~were~~ english. Speak english and hungarian as mother language, kill two birds with one stone. Whilst getting on well with your beloved, you get to know more people, actually interesting people from his/her culture. With more events comes more fun. For example, if you are half chinese, you can celebrate New Year twice a year!

As a disadvantage, I only can think about racism, especially in the children case. It's not rare that a child is being bullied because of his/her (whereabouts) origins. But as I mentioned before, learning different languages at their early years shall make it up for them.

In my opinion it's good to have a partner from another country at all. It's more exciting and interesting because you have to experience ~~the~~ your partner's country's culture and get used to it. The other ~~reason~~ good thing is that when you go to ~~the~~ see the relatives is kind of like a holiday if they live somewhere far from you.

It's good for the children ~~also~~ if they have parents from different countries too, because they've ~~also~~ got opportunity to learn lot of interesting things and they ~~would~~ aren't strangers in ~~there~~ ~~the~~ their parent's homeland.

As for me, ~~marry~~ marrying a girl from a different nationality or religion is not a big problem.

In my opinion everything depends on the personality of who I want to marry and as an add-on I get a whole new lifestyle. I can learn a different culture, cuisine.

It can also be good in the children's point of view. They can learn both languages (if we speak a different language) and they can be socialized for the cultural differences, they might be interested in it, too.

What about you?
